Audubon Center at Garden Creek serves as an outdoor classroom where your students can reinforce math concepts, write poetry, or use reading skills while experiencing the local habitats of Garden Creek.

Science concepts also can be taught by exploring habitats, seasons, life cycles or predator-prey relationships. Call or e-mail Wanda Peters at 307.473.1987 or wpeters@audubon.org for more detailed information.

The Audubon Center at Garden Creek (ACGC) was established in 1998 at the base of Casper Mountain. ACGC is a quiet piece of serenity on 450 acres of land with Garden Creek flowing through the property.

Audubon staff and volunteers provide programming on various natural history topics and assist teachers in designing lessons to complement core classroom concepts.

While field trips can be scheduled throughout the year, a winter adaptations field trip can be especially memorable.

Audubon Adventures Classroom Newspapers can make great pre-and post-visit materials, and look for new traveling trunks filled with resources and lessons to help teach science concepts and math and reading as well!
