Contemporary Art and Science: Laura Splan, Helen Otterson, and Kysa Johnson

Sep. 30-Jan. 8

Kysa Johnson: Terrible Beauty: Pollutants and Plagues

Kysa Johnson's paintings combine the traditions of landscape, still-life and battlefield paintings with a detailed look at the pollutants, pathogens and pharmaceutical cures for disease in our culture.

Helen Otterson: Coevolution

Utilizing clay and glass, Helen Otterson combines the human cellular structure with botanicals to explore beauty, survival and the radical change that disease causes in various life forms.

Laura Splan: Reformulations

Laura Splan's sculptures and drawings explore aspects of comfort and discomfort as well as beauty and repulsion as it relates to our bodies, their function, composition, and vulnerability.
